My dear Sir

I'll confess to the ~~edit~~ with a short notice of Rev. Cus. Westwick. You ought to have many subscribers here.

No, I did not miss your letter about the French review in the Athⁿ, but sent it to Sir C. H.
 Dilke, who read it, but said he still thought the article a good one, & he did not feel inclined to change his French man. He did to German one. Forgive me for not having written this sooner. I thought I had done

 I'm sorry to hear about Eli's book. I like his Preface much, but nothing can excuse a man for not collating lines; words except in passages not to be understood, I should excuse, when he convinced himself that he had the best of it.

Thanks many for your hints on the prop for Morris. There is no 'Romeo & Helene' in Paulin Paris's Catalogue: of a short saint's life, & some drawings after.

I envy you a chance of improving Louis St. Joseph's mind. I wish I had him for 3 days here.

Next time you go to his father's,
I wish you'd copy us 1000 lines of the rare translation of St Emileville's Peler. de la Vie Humaine.

Brush the Brit. Mus. MS. are in perfect, & tho' we have plenty of MS of the tail, we know of no others of the Life.

Lady Mordaunt ought certainly to have been a Parisienne. I hope we haven't many like her.

I shall send you the Chamberlain 1869-70 this week. Thos. Nash, to viewers. Yours sincerely J. J. F.
