Dear Monsieur

Here is Thomassy's book, why did you not ask me for it sooner if you wanted it. I am very sorry I've kept it so long, but you will find that it has improved

in my keeping, it
is so much older than when you had it.

Monsieur Réville
also kindly takes charge of a little sum of money that I owe you since Feb 7.
3 sh. 9 d., for which he will give you 4 fr. 69c.

We have been very glad to see him & his wife here, and I think they have enjoyed Oxford. I wished for you & Madeleine too, at my entertainment. I gave your message about their boy. - I hope you are all right, are you going to bring Madeline to England this year? I've not much faith in it.

I am fearfully busy
now, so must say

goodbye. with kindest remembrances to both

Yours

L. J. Smith
